2. Kona Coffee Tours & Tastings

Take Big Island Auto Rentals on the country roads of Kona, there are hundreds of coffee farms. Kailua-Kona is the hot spot with some of the world's greatest coffee. You'll find Kona coffee beans around the world.

Of course, you'll be able to get Kona coffee at farmers markets, cafes, and restaurants — but coffee tours right on the farms are something worth checking out.

Visit in the spring, around February and March, and get a chance to see the white coffee fruit blossoms. They are delicate white flowers that make the fields look like snow.

You can check out the tours any time of year though. However, if you go before noon, you'll get the sunshine. As it's more likely to rain after lunch. So, if you like to spend time in the sun, definitely go in the earlier mornings.

When you love coffee, it's totally recommended to visit at least a couple of farms. Many of the tours are free. They also offer samples at the end.

The average amount of time spent walking around a farm is 30 minutes. Afterward, you'll most likely be able to try their special coffee roasted styles. You can also buy right from the local coffee farmers.

Check out the map below of some of Kona Side's coffee tours and tasting destinations. Be sure to call and browse their website beforehand to understand their touring details.
